

Jazz Vocalist Sings at St. Louis Children's Hospital

April 3, 2009

The Washington University Neurofibromatosis (NF) Center in collaboration with Jazz St. Louis was delighted to host another outstanding jazz musician at the St. Louis Children's Hospital. Ms. Carla Cook sang for children and their parents in the Child Life Playroom on Friday afternoon.

Ms. Cook is a top-flight jazz vocalist who hails from Detroit, Michigan. She started singing as a young child in the Methodist Church. Ms. Cook attended Northeastern University in Boston, majoring in Speech Pathology.

She is critically acclaimed as a jazz singer/songwriter who sings standards beautifully.

During her performance, Ms. Cook spoke about several important figures in jazz music, and entertained the children with her rendition of St. Louis Blues.

Over the past several years, the Washington University NF Center has partnered with Jazz St. Louis in an effort to raise awareness about neurofibromatosis.

We thank Jazz St. Louis for their enthusiastic support.
